MEEKER HERD OF 175 IS DESTROYED

Chicagoan Readily Consents to Slaughter of $25,000 Worth of Fine Stock on Farms.

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE BREAK

Carcasses Are Buried in Huge Grave Seven Feet Deep and a Quarter of a Mile Wide.

A herd of prize dairy cattle owned by Arthur Meeker, vice president and general manager of Armour & Co., the Chicago packers, was slaughtered today because some of the animals were found to be infected with foot and mouth disease.

The herd, numbering 175 head, was valued at $25,000. Mr. Meeker will be reimbursed for the loss of the animals after an appraisal is made, the state and federal governments each paying half. He readily consented to destroying the herd, saying that slaughter was the only way to wipe out the disease.

Forty-five men worked yesterday afternoon and last night digging a huge grave seven feet deep by a quarter of a mile wide.

But for Mr. Meeker's foresight in anticipating the possibility of such a calamity, the babies and patients of Chicago hospitals who have daily consumed 3,000 to 3,500 bottles of Arcady Farm's milk, would suffer as the result of today's slaughter.

With the permission of the milk commission Mr. Meeker has contracted for the milk of the Tilden farms at Delevan, Wis. They are installing a new bottling plant. There, commencing yesterday, certified milk will be shipped direct to Chicago from that point, using new appliances and new bottles, seals and caps. This plant will be under the direction and certification of the milk commission.

Mr. Meeker's herd was examined by members of the state commission on Saturday, at which time it was declared to be "clean." At 9 o'clock that night one case of the dread disease was discovered. Yesterday morning there were three cases and later a total of five. It was then that the decision to destroy the entire herd was reached.

Mr. Meeker has two other herds five and twenty miles away from the main Arcady farms, which are under quarantine. These two herds number about 120 milch cows and some 350 young stock.

Mr. Meeker began the collection of his fine herd about 10 years ago. In all he has imported 350 Great Guernseys and Great Holsteins.

Just how the 175 head in the main herd contracted the disease, surrounded as it has been by every safeguard, is a mystery. The only theory that is given any credence is that it was carried by flies.

Five of Mrs. Scott Durand's cows died yesterday. Death was caused, Mrs. Durand said, not from hoof and mouth disease, but from being too long confined to the stables. They had cut their legs on the sharp edge of the curbing around the cemented floor, and this together with the disease, developed blood poison.

The inspectors are to blame for the contagion, she said. They carried it all over Lake county when they overran that territory "like the German army overran Belgium." She declared she felt just like a Belgian refugee.
